To an ever increasing degree, East German industrial enterprises which have to reduce the number of their skilled workers no longer serve dismissal notices but have the workers transferred to other enterprises. The distribution of skilled workers is effected by a central agency in the ministry concerned. It is believed that this new procedure which eliminates individual applications for skilled jobs [illegible] to avoid increases of salaries. Only technical personnel of some special categories are still free to apply for jobs where there are vacancies. The personnel department of the enterprise involved is, however, required to make inquiries about the applicant with the personnel department of his previous firm.
